Disclosure of EU personal data to public authorities and law enforcement agencies

DoHirus may be required to share your personal information in response to lawful requests by public authorities.

3(c) EU users and our lawful bases for using your data

Data protection law in Europe contains a number of "lawful bases," which are legal justifications for allowing organizations like us to have your personal information in the first place. We have been careful to ensure we have a lawful basis for using all EU user data. Our lawful bases include:

- Performing the contract we have with you: In certain circumstances, we need your personal data to comply with our contractual obligation to deliver access to the DoHirus Platform. For example, if you are a Client looking for a Tasker to carry out work at your home or office, we need your address so we can communicate the request to Taskers in the approximate area and tell the Tasker you choose where s/he needs to go.
- Legal compliance: Sometimes the law says we need to collect and use your data. For example, we might pass on details of people involved in fraud or other criminal activity to law enforcement.
- Legitimate interests: this is a technical term in data protection law which really means we have a good and fair reason to use your data and we do so in ways which do not materially impact your interests and rights. We sometimes require your data to pursue our legitimate interests in a manner that might reasonably be expected as part of running our business. For example, we will send you promotional communications about our service, subject to your legal rights to opt-out. We also analyze how Users interact with our Site and the DoHirus Platform so we can understand better what elements of the design are working well and which are not working so well. This allows us to develop and improve the quality of the online experience we offer all our Users.

Where we talk in this Privacy Policy about the different data we collect and how we use it, we aim to mention which lawful basis applies.

4. Information Received by DoHirus

Personal Information DoHirus collects certain information such as your name, address, approximate geographic location of your computer or mobile device, telephone number, email address and bank account and other Financial Information if you voluntarily choose to share such information with DoHirus. We do require that you furnish this information when you register with us as a Tasker or a Client, because we need the information in order to provide the DoHirus Platform. When you register your account, and through communications transmitted through our Site and your use of the DoHirus mobile application, we collect information including your name, address, phone number and email address. You also may choose to send DoHirus personal information in an email message containing inquiries about the DoHirus Platform. Certain offerings of the DoHirus Platform, such as newsletters, surveys, contests, and the like are optional and so you are not required to enter them or to give us your data in connection with them. Where you do choose to enter them, we will use your data to operate and manage the survey, contest or similar in connection with our legitimate interest in promoting our business and the DoHirus Platform.

You can instruct your browser, by changing its options, to stop accepting cookies or to prompt you before accepting a cookie from the websites you visit. If you do not accept cookies, however, you will not be able to use all portions or all functionalities of the DoHirus Platform.

We and our service providers may also use "pixel tags," "web beacons," "clear GIFs," or similar means in connection with the DoHirus Platform and HTML-formatted email messages to, among other things, track the actions of Users and email recipients, to determine the success of marketing campaigns, and to compile statistics about Site usage and response rates. We also engage one or more third party service providers to serve online advertisements on our behalf. They may use a “pixel tag” which triggers a cookie to collect information about your visits to the Site and to other websites, and they may use that information and share and combine it with other information with their partners to show you advertisements for goods and services you might be interested in on the Site and on other websites and apps, including by observing the kinds of products and subject-matter you are interested in and certain demographic information about you.
